28 Barkly Street is proud to present two of Australia's finest Schubertiens in a unique Schubert weekend with Schubert's greatest song cycle and a programme of some of his most extraordinary solo piano works. Geoffrey's October 2012 Sydney recital received rave reviews from Peter McCallum in the Sydney Morning Herald and from Lloyd Bradford Syke in Australian Stage, who described his playing as having "... a Russian fervour ... mercifully devoid of faux, fey, or fay delicacy. It is unaffected: ringing with sincerity, clarity, forthrightness, candour, class and maturity... It exudes the utmost taste". Peter McCallum wrote of his "... consummate musicianship ... glowing lyrical quality ... poetic sense of line, moulding the architecture of the work with focused intensity and impressive cumulative impact."

Peter Pinne in Stage Whispers wrote in July 2012 "... The revelation of the performance was how well Dominic Walsh, an Opera Queensland Young Artist 2012, sang ... His rich tenor registered time and time again."
